Reflection

"Though I walk in the midst of trouble, you preserve me against the wrath of my enemies; you stretch out your hand, and your right hand delivers me." (Psalm 138.7)

"Bowing down in the midst of trouble."

Not so long ago, I received a rather angry message from someone I respected. And, in that moment and the weeks that followed, I really struggled to know what to do with it. I was angry, upset, sad and I wanted to fight back, to make this person know the truth! I felt well in the midst of trouble.

For me, the Psalms are a dance of human emotion and thought, unfiltered and raw. I can identify with that because that is the way I experience life. And this psalm is a beautiful example of a dance I need to do with myself when feeling the way I did when I received the message. Earlier in the Psalm it talks about bowing down, worshipping God. And, doing that "in the midst of trouble" is maybe one of the most difficult, but the most important things, I can do.

I know, as I submit and bow down to God, as I re-engage with what Jesus has called me to, seeking to emulate His other-centred love, I start to let the pain sit and be still. Then the pain starts to remove its teeth and I stop having a tantrum about what I think is and isn't fair. Then I can ask myself, "How do I understand and respond in a way that worships God?"

As I seek to define myself in faithfulness to Jesus, I am reminded in these moments of pain how I am called to respond to and love people.

A little girl was at a wedding with her parents. Slightly confused, after the nuptial she asked her mother why the bride changed her mind. "What do you mean," responded her mother looking perplexed. "Well," the little girl, with the kind of observational powers only a child can manage. "She went down the aisle with one man and came back with another."
